Hill of 602 So. 5th St. Mr. Hill died at the age of 92 years . . . it was a crushing blow to him when the 1937 flood forced his unwilling retirement from active pursuits following 64 years of service. J. M. Hill came to Ironton in the Spring of 1873 at the age of 27 years. . . He and his brother Ezra D. Hill established the Hill Book Store in what is now the McCauley building of Second and Center street and from that time until the 1937 flood Mr. Hill's service to the public continued. His brother died in 1898 and Mr. Hill then moved to his location back of the McCauley building, in rooms now housing the Lambert Dress Shop. When Ironton launched its flood prevention program it looked to its oldest business man to turn the first shovel of dirt and Mr. Hill, together with Mr. E. F. Tyler, had the honor of leading flood wall ceremonies. Mr. Hill referred to the program as "my flood wall." Mr. Hill was born in Wooster, Wayne county, Ohio on August 18, 1846. Two brothers, later killed in battle, served in the Civil War and Mr. Hill enlisted for similar services but was sent home from camp due to his youth. Holt, Mrs. Abner - IR Sept. 16, 1886

Holt, Albert - IR Oct. 11, 1888 - A sudden death - Last Sunday afternoon, Albert Holt, a well known colored man was found dead in his bed at his home on Washington street. The immediate cause was heart trouble. His age was 42. He arrived in Ironton in 1856. He came from Kentucky with quite a company of slaves that had been liberated by their owner, Judge Holt. Judge Holt came to Ironton with his old slaves, and while living, exercised toward them a most fatherly care. He bought a little farm above Ice Creek for one of them. He also, purchased the cottage where Mrs. Moreland lives for another and it has remained in the family of the owner ever since. Judge Holt died in this town a few years after his arrival, mourned by his former slaves and this entire community. The way he happened to come to Ironton was Rev. J. F. Given, a nephew of his, preached at Spencer Chapel. Mr. Given was probably the finest scholar Spencer ever had. He was a man of wonderfully fine social and scholarly instincts; and he won Judge Holt to him and his liberal ideas. Thus Judge Holt came here and gathered his old slaves about him, and helped them to enjoy their freedom. . . . Albert Holt was ten years old when the little colony of freedmen came to town in 1856. . . .
